Discussion highlights

The discussions during the webinar focused on the following points, which are further elaborated upon below:

- Several WTO members from the Caribbean region participate in the negotiations on the IFD Agreement. The total number of participating Members represents two-thirds of the WTO membership, which is impressive and speaks volumes about the importance that WTO Members attach to investment facilitation. Participants in the IFD Agreement negotiations aim to conclude the text-based negotiations by the end of 2022. It is recognised by negotiators that, in order for an IFD Agreement to fully benefit developing and least developed country (LDCs) Members, it is important to ensure the implementation capacity of WTO Members. Accordingly, a gap analysis and need assessment process that may begin later in 2022 is an important part of the negotiations.
- The COVID-19 pandemic has had a devastating impact on the global economy and in particular on the flows of foreign direct investment (FDI) to the Small Island Developing States (SIDS) of the Caribbean region. The IFD Agreement can help revitalise FDI flows. International cooperation on investment facilitation could not come at a more important moment, both for the Caribbean region itself and for the world. Promoting greater multi-stakeholder knowledge sharing by understanding which policies and practices increase the quantity and the quality of FDI are critical. The IFD Agreement provides an institutional platform and framework for cooperation and exchange of best practices with respect to both investment facilitation and the resources needed to support investment facilitation efforts at the national, regional and international levels. The IFD Agreement is not only about attracting more investment: it is also about attracting better, higher quality investment – investment that is fully aligned with the sustainable development priorities.
- Caribbean economies attribute much importance to investment facilitation and are undertaking many measures to facilitate FDI flows. However, the Caribbean economies suffer from technical and capacity constraints in implementing investment facilitation measures. Consequently, there is significant value added in an IFD Agreement: it can lead to more resources, support, commitments, and confidence on the part of investors, and support national efforts that are already taking place in the Caribbean region.
- There are little normative risks in participating in the IFD Agreement negotiations, whereas there are important benefits. Participants are part of the process of shaping rules that are consistent with the Caribbean economies' overall needs and development objectives. It is therefore important that as many Caribbean countries as possible actively participate in the IFD negotiations to make their voices heard and to advance their interests.

I. The status of the WTO investment facilitation for development negotiations

The IFD Agreement negotiations bring together over 110 WTO Members at all levels of development, aiming to conclude the text-based negotiations by the end of 2022.¹ Currently, the following Members from Caribbean economies are participating: Antigua and Barbuda, Barbados, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Grenada, and Suriname.

The IFD Agreement aims to create a better investment environment and facilitate FDI flows notably to developing countries and LDCs. As part of the ongoing negotiations on investment facilitation, participating WTO Members are discussing international best practices on key issues such as: improving the transparency of investment measures, for example, making available relevant measures and information for investors online, and where practicable, through a single portal; simplifying and speeding up administrative procedures by reducing red tape and unnecessary procedural steps; strengthening the dialogue between governments and investors, and between host and home governments; and, promoting the uptake by companies of responsible business conduct practices, as well as preventing and fighting corruption.

Strengthening sustainable investment provisions under the IFD Agreement is a key issue for a number of Members and fundamental for the promotion of sustainable development. There is a great level of support for the notion that foreign investors should abide by certain internationally recognised principles, standards and guidelines concerning responsible business conduct. Participants also recognise the importance of measures to prevent and combat corruption. The IFD Agreement's current draft includes a section on sustainable investment (comprising provisions on responsible business conduct and measures against corruption respectively) as well as additional provisions such as the creation of local supplier databases to facilitate linkages between foreign investors and domestic firms. The current draft also includes technical assistance and capacity building provisions to ensure the implementation of the measures under the IFD Agreement by developing and LDC Members.

It is recognised by negotiators that, in order for an IFD Agreement to fully benefit developing and LDC Members, it is important to ensure the implementation capacity of WTO Members. Accordingly, a gap analysis and needs assessment process is desirable to start prior to the conclusion of the Agreement. The needs assessment process is one of the priority areas for developing and LDC Members. A working group led by the WTO secretariat and comprised of leading international organisations active in the field is preparing an 'Investment Facilitation Self-Assessment Guide' to help WTO Members self-assess their needs and priorities for the effective implementation of the future IFD Agreement and the technical assistance and capacity building needs associated with implementation.

II. The value-added of an IFD Agreement – A Caribbean perspective

The COVID-19 pandemic has had a devastating impact on the global economy and in particular on FDI flows to the Small Island Developing States (SIDS) of the Caribbean region – one of the world's most tourism-dependent regions. In 2020, FDI flows to the Caribbean declined by 36% and economic activity contracted sharply across the region. FDI is essential to spur a strong economic recovery and to set the foundations for building more resilient, sustainable and inclusive Caribbean economies.

Against this background, the IFD Agreement can help revitalise FDI flows. It provides guidance for countries on how to improve the FDI climate, including making investment-related information more easily available, reducing red tape, helping investors navigate complex regulations, and assisting investors in amicably resolving complaints. All of these can provide a boost in confidence to both domestic and foreign investors. These measures are also particularly relevant for small and medium-size enterprises (SMEs) that have to rely on their own time and limited resources for regulatory compliance.

International cooperation on investment facilitation could not come at a more important moment, both for the Caribbean region and for the world. Promoting greater multi-stakeholder knowledge-sharing by understanding which policies and practices increase the quantity and the quality of FDI are critical. The IFD Agreement provides an institutional platform and framework for cooperation and exchange of best practices with respect to investment facilitation, as well as the resources needed to support investment facilitation efforts at the national, regional and international levels. The adoption of international benchmarks for investment facilitation can help countries promote sustainable development in three dimensions: economic, social and environmental.

The IFD Agreement is not only about attracting more investment – it is also about attracting better, higher quality investment: investment that is fully aligned with the sustainable development priorities. Adhering to the IFD Agreement signals to the world that Members are open to sustainable FDI and are prepared to upgrade facilitation measures and mechanisms to enhance the flow of this type of investments.

The Caribbean region is very vulnerable to climate change and natural disasters. Extreme weather events are common – and becoming more so. Mobilising high-quality FDI from multiple sources is critically important to help build resilience against extreme weather events, and to meet other major challenges of the 21st century, from accelerating the digital transformation, to building sustainable food systems, to making economies more inclusive. The IFD Agreement can be part of a broader strategy to meet the Caribbean region’s Sustainable Development Goals. It will allow participants to capture the synergies between investment and trade to create not only more but also better jobs, and to open new opportunities for small businesses, including those owned by women.

III. The importance of investment facilitation for the Caribbean region and the need for capacity building

For the Caribbean economies, FDI is a key engine of economic growth and development, and investment facilitation efforts are taking place on the national and regional levels. FDI contributes to a substantial portion of the GDP of the Caribbean region. It is a source for employment and technology transfer. Foreign investors help stimulate domestic activity by procuring goods and services from local businesses.

In 2020, most Caribbean countries reported that they were implementing investment facilitation measures. In particular, many countries have reported that they are taking measures to promote the transparency of investment policies, regulations and procedures, including through the establishment of national business portals that provide detailed guidance on government requirements throughout the entire life-cycle of investment projects, and which also provide online investment guides. A number of countries are also taking measures to improve the efficiency of investment-related administrative procedures, such as streamlined procedures for starting a business and online business registration systems. Many national investment promotion agencies provide various facilitation services, such as information provision, aftercare services and policy advocacy. There is increasingly a focus on improving standards of corporate governance and responsible business conduct. Caribbean countries are trying to strengthen their capacity to maximise the positive impacts of FDI, seeking to develop national sourcing policies to increase linkages between SMEs and multinational enterprises.

However, Caribbean economies suffer from technical and capacity constraints in implementing investment facilitation measures. In the World Bank's 2020 'ease of doing business' report, only a couple of Caribbean economies were in the top 100: Jamaica (ranked 71) and St Lucia (ranked 93). This suggests that significant work needs to be done with respect to enhancing the domestic business environment. This is especially important following the COVID-19 pandemic, which accelerated the need to provide e-government services, including to foreign investors. Studies show that, in the Caribbean, digital readiness still lags behind other regions. Only a few countries have adopted online one-stop shop options or other e-government services. One of the key ways for bridging this gap is through bringing in knowledge from other countries.

It was specifically noted by foreign investors in the region that most Caribbean countries are currently missing some of the key investment facilitation measures such as a well-defined mapping of administrative processes and guidance available to investors; online one-stop shops; timely updates regarding application processes; possibilities to sign application documents online; clear and transparent tax incentives; and local supplier databases. It was also emphasised that local supply capacity could be strengthened through investment facilitation measures such as supplier development programmes.

It is clear that the Caribbean economies are attributing much importance to investment facilitation and are undertaking many measures to facilitate FDI. However, there is still a lot to be done, and this emphasises the value-added of the IFD Agreement and how the Agreement could provide more resources, support, commitments, and confidence by investors to support national and regional efforts that are already taking place in the Caribbean region.

To ensure that developing countries from the region as well as beyond the region benefit from the IFD Agreement, it is key to focus on support for implementation. Accordingly, firm commitments for technical assistance and capacity building under the IFD Agreement are important for enabling developing and LDC Members to implement the Agreement and fully benefit from it, and it is critical to assess the current situation in terms of investment facilitation reforms and the barriers that prevent reforms in certain areas.

Since 2020, some Caribbean countries have been undertaking an investment facilitation gap analysis as part of their efforts to monitor the IFD Agreement negotiations and assess implementation gaps and needs. However, this process has been resource intensive. Accordingly, the self-assessment process that will be undertaken in the framework of the IFD Agreement negotiations complements the ongoing efforts by Caribbean economies. Developing country participants in the negotiations see needs assessments as essential to advance work on investment facilitation. Needs assessments will allow developing and LDC Members to better self-designate the pace for implementation and identify the technical assistance and capacity building support they need to implement the IFD Agreement.

IV. The important role Caribbean economies have in the IFD negotiations

As stated above, the IFD Agreement can play a role in stimulating higher FDI flows, including sustainable FDI flows. The Caribbean region should give significant priority to investment facilitation and, specifically, to the IFD Agreement negotiations because of the development objectives of the IFD Agreement.

The IFD Agreement has the potential to complement and expedite domestic reform efforts, particularly as they relate to removing impediments for investors and strengthening regulatory frameworks to ensure that the Caribbean economies benefit more fully from inward FDI that aligns favourably with their national priorities for sustainable development.

There are little normative risks to participating in the IFD Agreement negotiations, whereas there are important benefits. Negotiating Members are part of the process of shaping rules that are consistent with the Caribbean economies' overall needs and development concerns. A key pillar of the IFD Agreement is special and differential treatment. Participants from the Caribbean region have been among the main proponents of effective special and differential provisions in the future Agreement. The participation of additional Caribbean economies in the negotiations would assist in promoting special and differential treatment provisions, technical assistance and capacity building, as well as the sustainable development dimension of the Agreement.

Another important challenge for Caribbean economies is to support the inclusion of home state obligations in the IFD Agreement, especially since the subject of home state obligations is still under consideration. Home countries have an important role to play in terms of incentivising investors to invest abroad and encouraging responsible business conduct in outward FDI. Accordingly, it is important that as many Caribbean countries as possible actively participate in the IFD negotiations to make their voices heard and advance their interests.

Invitation: High-Level Regional Roundtable on Investment Facilitation for Development: How Caribbean Economies Will Benefit

10 May 2022, 16:00pm-18:30pm CET, 10:00am to 12:30pm (Barbados, GMT -4)

Dear Colleagues,

We cordially invite you to attend the ‘High-Level Regional Roundtable on Investment Facilitation for Development: How Caribbean Economies Will Benefit’, co-organised by the International Trade Centre (ITC), the United Nations Economic Commission for Latin America and the Caribbean (ECLAC), the Inter-American Development Bank (IDB), the Commission of the Organisation of Eastern Caribbean States (OECS), the German Institute of Development and Sustainability (IDOS), the Shridath Ramphal Centre for International Trade Law, Policy and Services (SRC) of The University of the West Indies’ Cave Hill Campus (The UWI Cave Hill) in Barbados, and the World Economic Forum (WEF). The Roundtable is convened in the framework of the Investment Facilitation for Development project, jointly implemented by ITC and IDOS. It will take place on 10 May 2022, 16:00pm-18:30pm CET, 10:00am to 12:30pm (Barbados, GMT -4).

The event will be conducted in English.

To register for the event and receive the meeting-link details, please register here. Please note that, to avoid any difficulties, only participants who register will receive the password to join the on-line Roundtable.

This high-level event is meant to offer a platform for a strategic exchange on the negotiations on an Investment Facilitation for Development (IFD) Agreement in the World Trade Organisation (WTO), launched in September 2020 after over two years of preparatory discussions. The negotiations bring together over 110 WTO Members at all levels of development, aiming to conclude the text negotiations by the end of 2022.² Currently, the following Members from Caribbean economies are participating: Antigua and Barbuda, Barbados, Dominica, Dominican Republic, Grenada, and Suriname.

High-level policy makers, government officials, private sector representatives, and eminent academic scholars will participate in the Roundtable, to be updated on the negotiations and to raise awareness on their progress and reflect on how countries may best make use of the IFD Agreement to enhance their business climate, attract higher value-added investment and boost economic growth, digital economy innovations and sustainable development. This reflection process also seeks to help participants to ensure that their countries’ international engagement is in line with their sustainable development goals (SDGs) and their national reform agendas.

² Participating Members reflect a wide geographic representation, the majority being developing countries (77), including 20 least-developed country (LDC) Members. The current list of participating Members is available here.

This process is particularly important and timely as a working group led by the WTO secretariat and comprised of leading international organisations active in the field is preparing an 'Investment Facilitation Self-Assessment Guide' to help WTO Members self-assess their needs and priorities for the effective implementation of the future IFD Agreement and the technical assistance and capacity building needs associated with implementation. Need assessments are expected to begin in the second half of this year.

The Roundtable will provide a brief background on the focus and progress of the IFD Agreement negotiations and explore the benefits and challenges of an IFD Agreement for Caribbean economies.

The overall objective of this Roundtable is to facilitate a discussion of the issues surrounding the IFD Agreement. It will be held under the Chatham House Rule, to facilitate open and results-oriented discussions.

Although the Roundtable is focused on the WTO Investment Facilitation for Development negotiations from the Caribbean economies' perspective, the event will address issues that will be of interest also to investment promotion agencies and policy makers outside the region. Please feel free to invite your investment facilitation colleagues from your government to participate in the roundtable as well.

We are looking forward to welcoming you at the Roundtable!

Thank you and best regards,
